Less than 24 hours after losing Andre Roberson for the season in an emotional victory in Detroit, the Thunder had another energetic Eastern Conference foe to contend with in the Philadelphia 76ers.With Russell Westbrook at the helm. however, in a moment where the Thunder needed to show resolve and mental toughness, there was no doubt that the team was going to show up. After a back and forth first half, the Thunder took control with a 15 0 run late in the third quarter behind a coordinated offensive effort by Russell Westbrook and Paul George, then closed out the game by outscoring Philadelphia 21 11 over the final 6:18 of action to close out a 122 112 victory. It was the Thunder's eighth straight victory, and a massive one considering how distracting and painful the loss of Roberson might have been in the background.

"The success that Pittsburgh had last week, they are more of a vertical passing game, New England is more of a horizontal passing game. They'll do some seams, but I think [their passing offense] matches up very well for Jacksonville," Cowher said. "They've got speed at linebacker, they can rush, the only question is does the no huddle affect that rush? They can come will tye jersey out in three tight ends and two backs and run the ball.
