Freestyle skiing is not portrayed as an impact sport like football, but what most people don realize is that it is. In a 7 year study of injuries in freestyle and alpine skiing and snowboarding, it was revealed that the majority of head injuries and concussions were freestyle skiing injuries and one in four head injuries were severe. As you can imagine, head injuries are more likely to occur while hitting aerial jumps in terrain parks and doing inverted tricks (as seen in the above video) than while traditionally skiing.

Players who play football know that they have a high chance of getting hurt. Even with this apparent danger concussions have been a huge problem for the league and its image. It has gotten so bad that recently a number of former players actually sued the NFL for negligence and improper medical treatment of concussions.
