Picking a favourite on the women's side remains as thankless a task as ever, especially after Serena Williams's withdrawal. Who could have predicted that Jelena Ostapenko or Sloane Stephens would win their first grand slam titles last year? Still, if form is anything to go by then Svitolina will regard this as a fine opportunity to break her duck. The world No9 was a semi finalist in 2016 and she also reached the last eight last year, losing to Serena Williams, the eventual champion, while a run to the last four at Wimbledon suggested that Konta could follow in Virginia Wade's footsteps one day.
