A couple years ago on Seattle radio he said guy thinks people pay their money to watch him. There are constant discussions going on. Carey was probably fine in those situations, where another ref may keep you from making a mistake. One of the main reasons technology compromise a sport experience is that people are watching the games at home instead of watching the games that are played live. Some people would rather stay at home than spend the money to go to the game. With the games being shown on television that means fewer supporters in attendance.
