Always knew it was going to be a difficult process for us, but we felt like it was worth us giving it a real shot. Based on all the video we have and the accounts that we have, our version [of what happened] is correct. It's not wrong. Now would be a great time to build a marketing plan. The plan will change and evolve over time but having a structure helps to make sure that your marketing spend is aligning with your goals without being completely ad hoc, spray and pray of the day. The plan shouldn't be a massive undertaking it's a rough guide that documents what you are planning on doing and why you are doing it.

The third Sunday of the football season is finished and now we starting to notice some trends. After three weeks it become difficult to ignore trends (despite really wanting to) and while the NFL is league of copy and adjust, those adjustments don normally happen overnight. If something is happening after three weeks its likely going to take a another month or so before the league figures it out..
