After what is sure to be an entertaining game on Thursday, the Sunday slate of games appears to be the most entertaining to date. Contenders such as the Houston Texans and the reigning NFC champion San Francisco 49ers will clash, as will two playoff hopefuls when the Seattle Seahawks travel to Indianapolis to face Andrew Luck and the Colts. Below is a prediction for every contest on the Week 5 lineup, followed by an emphasis on three marquee matchups. Seattle Seahawks 35. Indianapolis Colts 30The Seattle Seahawks and Indianapolis Colts have plenty in common, including playoff appearances last year, sophomore quarterbacks and stellar starts to the 2013 season. When the two collide in Lucas Oil Stadium in Week 5. much will be revealed about both sides. For Indianapolis, a convincing win over San Francisco in Week 3 pegs the Colts as contenders. It's the same story for Seattle, which handed San Francisco a beatdown as well in Week 2 and made a surging comeback in Week 4 to topple the Texans. The story here is the passing game.

I still don understand these professional athletes who continue to pump drugs/smoke/pot into their system and wonder why they under perform. I mean I actually do, it just laughable to see people defending smoking pot, and then comparing it to alcohol. Yes, both can be bad, but pot smoking is for Pot does not make you faster, it makes dumber.
