and here's what it taught me

It has definitely been a wild ride over the last two years interesting times indeed. Along the way, we tackled many of same problems that security researchers face when reporting vulnerabilities to vendors, and we learned valuable lessons that will continue to not only make MSVR better, but also that we can channel back to our colleagues in the MSRC. We forged stronger relationships with other security response teams and vendors throughout the ecosystem as well as with the talented security researchers both internal to and outside of Microsoft..
