Like you said everyone is different, at 17 you're still growing, so your muscles used for jumping are not the primary focus of your bodies development. Peak natural leaping ability, without training occurs around 15 18, but that's by no means a deterant because you're still able to harness and extend on that with training. At the moment at 17 you'll have plateaued with you jumping, but you'll still be far from your peak, just be patient, wait for your body to catch up ( not meaning stop training) and you'll start steadily improving again.

Living near Charlotte I have been to many Panther games and as Raiders fan I can say the fanbase is one of the worst as far as attending games. During Raider games there over the years rocking my gear I have been insulted, cursed and goaded to fight by drunken Rednecks. Even when I wasn there to see the Raiders and not wearing my gear I have seen this done to opposing fans.
