He's not sitting out a championship game. But once we acknowledge he has a real injury that's significant enough to force him out of practice (let it go, conspiracy theorists), it's hard to get a grasp on how much it will affect Brady's play. If he has trouble gripping the ball, nobody should have to explain how that would be an issue against the Jacksonville Jaguars' No.

Philadelphia Eagles: Safety Malcolm Jenkins continued his protest by raising a fist over his head prior to the Eagles game at the Kansas City Chiefs. He has been demonstrating since Week 2 of last season. Defensive end Chris Long kept his hand on Jenkins' back for the entire playing of "The Star Spangled Banner," as he did during the preseason in a show of support.

Ah yes, but keep in mind these aren just employees my friend. These are cream of the crop, the ones everyone wants! Still today, employers vie for coveted employees. I know professionals who have been poached off one company roster to another thru social media like Facebook and LinkedIn.
