As every season passes, I become more and more encompassed with the National Football League. I find myself becoming more attached to every storyline throughout the entire year. I become more involved with the draft process, the training camp headlines, and free agent acquisitions.

Today's animals are megachiropterans, or "big winged" bats more commonly known as megabats or fruit bats. Unlike the bats that pop into most people's minds when they hear that word, the megabats are frugivorous (fruit eaters) or nectarivorous (nectar eaters) mammals that don't use echolocation to find their food sources. Most species of megabats locate their meals by sight, so they have large eyes and keen eyesight.

Meanwhile, United's hopes of signing Ryan Sessegnon this month have been dealt a blow after Fulham's head of football operations insisted the 17 year old would not be leaving Craven Cottage in January. Sessegnon, who finished as joint top scorer at the European Under 19 Championship in June with three goals, has been tracked by United's scouts for some time and has also attracted interest from Tottenham and Real Madrid. The European champions have watched the defender on several occasions this season and are understood to be monitoring his situation, while Spurs had a bid potentially worth more than 20m with add ons rejected in the summer.
