Instead, his new wife would live with her husband's family and work for and serve his household. Women had very few choices or rights. They were expected to obey their father until they married, then they would obey their husband. Randall Weaver, his wife Vicki, their two children Sara and Sammy and their adopted son Kevin Harris were not ordinary mainstream Americans. Their extremist right wing views led them to seek refuge from mainstream society in the remote hilltops of Ruby Ridge, near Bonners Ferry in Northwest Idaho. Their goal was to create a self sufficient refuge according to the doctrines of the Christian Identity movement, which saw the Anglo Saxon race as the true Chosen People of the Bible, besieged by a Zionist controlled government.
