The interesting decision that comes from this dilemma is how to approach the superstar market. Every year, the National Football League (NFL) and the National Basketball Association (NBA) hold entry level drafts for rookies. These drafts are full of talent that owners can pursue.

"All 32 NFL teams are invited to provide input on draft eligible players which is used by the Player Selection Committee to select each year's participants. The Directors of both National and BLESTO scouting services, which combined represent 28 NFL teams, are joined by members of various NFL player personnel departments to form the committee. The participating NFL executives can rotate on a yearly basis, and remain anonymous.
