In 1894, a plan was made to re enact the olden Olympic Games of Greece by a Frenchman called Baron Pierre de Coubertin (Margol, 2). At first glance, sports being played during the Cold War were to be seen as entertainment and "as a combination of religious practice and great fun" (Margol, 2) as it is currently, but to others during 1960 and 1989, it became "a weapon of international affairs" (Hill) especially between massive countries such as the Soviet Union and the United States. Sport sometimes helped ease violent tensions ("American Society Culture in the Cold War.") especially between major countries such as the Soviets and the United States during the Cold War, but at the same time, it played a role as "particularly prominent venues for rivalry" ("American Society Culture in the Cold War"), "a propaganda machine" (Margol, 4), and the participation of it was used as an excuse to try to make the Soviet Union remove their troops from Afghanistan (Margol, 9).
