Recent statements by Tiger Woods and Dustin Johnson, coupled with more concerted efforts by the likes of Gary Player, suggest something is imminent regarding the distance of modern golf ball travel. The sport, in short, has fallen out with the idea of extending courses time and again because players can overpower all before them. Nothing like this ever happens quickly but expect 2018 to be the year where meaningful efforts are made by governing bodies to "roll back" the ball, perhaps even by breaking with history by applying a professional and amateur standard.
