Description: Drawing on 15 months of ethnographic research in one of the most under developed regions in the Caribbean island of Trinidad, this book describes the uses and consequences of social media for its residents. Jolynna Sinanan argues that this semi urban town is a place in between: somewhere city dwellers look down on and villagers look up to. The complex identity of the town is expressed through uses of social media, with significant results for understanding social media more generally Not elevating oneself above others is one of the core values of the town, and social media becomes a tool for social visibility; that is, the process of how social norms come to be and how they are negotiated.

Alienation according to Marx is the objectification of human powers used for production that does not represent your own essence. Once the worker puts their life into lawrence thomas jersey the object they produce through their labor, it's gone forever. To this effect your labor is what enables your existence, rather than your existence being displayed through your labor. When means of existence are displayed through labor, we approach a problem which for Marx is that of why alienation in a capitalist society is bad for individuals.
