"I know there's definitely egos" in pro sports, Kamara said this week as the Saints prepared to open the playoffs Sunday against Carolina. "I think people questioned it a lot, like, 'Are they really that close? They seem close, but are they really that close?' But it's really one of those things where we're actually close and we care about each other and we care about more than just the football player part of it. I genuinely care about the dude.".
