You could tell that he was good, but I guess he was nervous. He was lazy. He didn't play like he wanted to.. This was his first season under new offensive coordinator Ben McAdoo after the departure of Kevin Gilbride.[9]Pugh entered training camp as the starting left guard after the New York Giants signed free agent Marshall Newhouse and named him the starting right tackle. The Giants originally drafted Pugh with the intention to have him play offensive guard, but decided to keep him at right tackle. They also stated that Pugh was better suited for guard under Ben McAdoo's offense.[10] Pugh started 14 games throughout the season and missed two games (Weeks 10/ and 12) due to a concussion.[11] He received high grades, played well throughout the season, and was ranked fifth among all offensive guards in performance grades (+12.5) through the first eight games.[12] By the end of the season he was ranked the ninth best offensive guard by Pro Football Focus with an overall grade of 86.7.[13]On April 26, 2016, the New York Giants chose to pick up the fifth year, $8.82 million option on Pugh's rookie contract.[14].
