In 1998 the Colts, for the 4th time in 15 years, held the 1st overall pick in the draft and for the 3rd time in 15 years selected a quarterback this time University of Tennessee's Peyton Manning.

Manning started the first game of his rookie season and started every single Colts game since until the start of the 2011 season, when a recurring neck injury sidelined him. Despite a difficult rookie season, where he threw a league high 28 interceptions, Manning and the Colts responded by finishing 13 3 in 1999.

The historical stat keeping side of things of this whole issue is what is really interesting. What do they do with the stats of players who overlapped between the kony ealy jersey old Charlotte Hornets and the New Orleans Hornets teams? The NOH stats are kept in the history of the Pelicans franchise. Now for players like Jamal Mashburn and Baron Davis, isn't it just unfair that their stats for their years on the old Charlotte/New Orleans Pelicans are now divided into two separate teams when they really only played for one? What if Baron Davis should be something like 3rd all time in assists for the Pelicans franchise bryce petty jersey but is now a lot lower because the stats from the Cha.
