With McCollum being a tweener, scoring type PG that could be a posssiblity, I haven't seen enough of either McCollum or Kabongo to be confident that either one will turn out to be the pg/leader we need but we need to do something in that area. We need players with handles that can break the defense down and create for themselves and others. I'm hoping McCollum and Kabongo could do that, so your idea of 2 point guards in the 1st round isn't too bad.
