Commissioner Roger Goodell blurred those lines while defending on Friday the decision to ask former FBI director Robert Mueller to investigate the NFL handling of the Ray Rice case. Whether Mueller actually behaves independent of any concern other than getting to the truth will be impossible to prove without getting inside his mind. While his extensive service as FBI director provides a patina of credibility, plenty of people who have held plenty of big titles have succumbed to human nature or other factors that result in the person straying from the goal of doing the right thing in every situation and circumstance..
