I like it when people go on here and say things like the fans that pay for the team and players salaries First no one cares about the fans that go to the stadium. Ticket sales revenue is peanuts compared to TV tights and merchandise. Second, you aren going to stop watching football on TV.

It would be in Edmonton best interest to decide on Yamamoto fate before he plays in his 10th NHL game, when he would burn a year off his entry level contract (but not a year towards free agency yet). As the team continues to struggle to score with just 16 lorenzo mauldin jersey goals at 5 on 5 in 11 games, Edmonton need for a goal getting right winger has become obvious. And it possible they try and flip a player they just acquired in the summer to get it.
