Duh. Talk about nonsensical. NFL football has zilch to do with it a business that makes wealthy men wealthier. Drafting running backs is always a tricky proposition, as it hard to predict who will get the goal line carries, and who will get injured. Two items to pay attention to are the yards per carry and total carries from the previous season. If a player succeeded in a limited role with greater than 4.5 yards per carry, then they are due for an increase in action.
