In a four run seventh inning, the Red Sox gained momentum from a strange play in which Blue Jays catcher Russell Martin fielded a tapper by Dustin Pedroia but threw t—shirts errantly to first. In fact, the throw, which nearly hit Pedroia, went out of play. Pedroia was awarded second base, and at the discretion of the umpires, Andrew Benintendi, who started the play at second, was permitted to score to make it a one run game..

That option went out the window when Carolina (14 1) was upset 20 13 by the Atlanta Falcons on Sunday, ending the Panthers bid for an unbeaten season and preventing them from wrapping up the No. 1 seed. The Arizona Cardinals (14 2) can still claim home field advantage in the NFC if Carolina loses and they beat the Seattle Seahawks on Sunday.
