Executive Summary: The BirdStrike project aimed to develop a validated bird strike numerical analysis tool, which would enable the Smart Fixed Wing Aircraft programme partners to simulate bird impact on a composite leading edge for a Natural Laminar Flow wing. This was achieved by setting up a combined program of numerical methodologies and models development and experimental tests to be used for numerical models validation. The main scientific and technical work performed in the frame of the project included: Development of a Finite Element numerical methodology based on the stacked shell approach for the efficient simulation of bird strike incidents on composite panels.
